FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1906.

It does not require a microscope to see Boss Reuf's finish.

The president has issued a proclamation naming Thursday, Nov. 29, as Thanksgiving day.

The Methodist preachers of Portland say there is no fuel trust in the northwest. This does settle it.

With the Colorado crop of potatoes frozen by the cold snap of last week, spuds will be spuds before spring.

St. Johns is full of great big, husky, double-breasted kickers. That's a good sign. It denotes plenty of good red blood.

Doesn't it gall you when you read of the large clean ups that so-and-so is making in Oregon real estate. Pour a little sand in your craw and you can do the same.

Although the Seattle fair is two years away, all will remember how royally she patronized the Lewis and Clark fair and will do the right thing when the time comes.

Let the ordinance compelling the taking out of building permits be drawn, passed and put into effect. When it is in operation the amount of building can be ascertained easily and readily.

The Walker Lake Indian reservation was thrown open for settlement last Monday, and the stampede for claims baffles description. The reservation embraces fine mineral and grazing lands.

William Rudolph Hearst is making it extremely warm for the opposition when they openly appeal to the president to come to their aid. The grasping corporations certainly have something to learn in case the young Californian wins.

Flushed by her success in whipping the Russian bear, little Japan is said to be carrying a chip on her shoulder and defying Uncle Sam to knock it off. Looks as though the Philippines will be the cause of serious trouble in the near future.

Boss Reuf of San Francisco is in the toils at last and Heney has got him about where he wants him. It would take all of Liza Butterbottom Bennett's optimism to find a bright side for the grafter, unless the Standard Oil Co. could be induced to lend Judge Banker to preside for the occasion.

Not to be outdone by its more enterprising rival who had genuine Hood River apples on display, a Portland firm purchased a number of boxes of worms' fruit and labeled them as the real thing from up the river. It was only when they were threatened with a suit for damages that the fake fruit was removed.

The Standard Oil judge before whom the Standard Oil Co. was convicted of conspiracy in restraint of trade fined the company $5,000. Under the cumulative law the fine should have been millions, but the judge Standard Oil selected to try the case said no. Still people wonder how immense fortunes can be made.

The proposition to lop ten feet off Philadelphia street and add it on to the city hall block should be met with vigorous opposition. Philadelphia street is the widest and can be made the handsomest street leading to the river. It was planned to be the main thoroughfare to the water front. The narrowing of the street at the top of the hill would spoil the looks of the whole thoroughfare. It should not be done unless it is absolutely necessary.

The Dalles Optimist recently had an article to the effect that the legislature would do the proper thing in turning down the candidacy of Jonathan Bourne for U. S. Senator. It has attracted a great deal of attention and considerable comment from the press throughout the state. Last week The Optimist came back with more—and pretty good argument, too—to the effect that it will not add to Oregon's prestige to carry out the instructions as given at the election last summer. Bro. Bennett's pen may arouse the Hon. Long Green to renewed activity, but it is extremely doubtful if it can prevent the man who used printer's ink and the mails so promiscuously from hanging up his coat in the capitol at Washington, D. C.

With the bank clearings for the month of October $5,000,000 larger than they were last year, Portland is making some of the coast cities use their spurs.

A monument is proposed for Major Henry Wirz, the inhuman monster who was in charge of the Andersonville prison pen during the war. There is many a G. A. R. veteran who suggest an appropriate design.

The absurdity of the ship subsidy bill is brought out by the fact that it costs as much per thousand to ship lumber to San Francisco as it does to Hong Kong, China. The passage of this infamous bill by congress means that the nation is assisting the people to rob themselves.

Stephen A. Douglas Puter, whom Francis J. Henry landed behind the bars, and who is at present serving his sentence, says Mr. Heney will put the stripes on the San Francisco gang of hoodlums. If there is any better recommendation for the able prosecutor The Review would like to see it.

The Portland butcher who brought the meat trust to time did it through judicious advertising. Although his shop was on a side street and in a poor location for business he brought the octopus to its knees. Day in and day out he appealed to the people to help him "lick the meat trust." He kept everlastingly at his advertising, and he landed the patronage. The Review feels like taking off its hat to this butcher who knew how.

COUNCIL

Meets in Regular Session and Transacts Routine Business.

All members were in their seats and a fair sized audience was present when Mayor Hinman called the council to order Tuesday evening. The session was productive of more surprises than legislation, and was continued until a late hour.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. A petition was presented asking that ten feet be taken off Philadelphia street and added to the city hall property. Referred back for signatures.

A petition for an arc light at the corner of Bradford and Burlington streets was referred to the lighting committee.

A petition was received from P. J. Peterson and Henry W. Smith stating that they had purchased a controlling interest in the ferry at this point and asking for an extension of the ferry franchise for ninety days in order to enable them to make the necessary repairs and place a first class boat in commission. The petition stated that the new company is to remodel and put everything in shape for first class service, and in order to carry out their plans an extension was asked. The matter was favorably received by the council, and after numerous questions had been satisfactorily answered the extension was granted on condition that the petitioners put up a satisfactory bond for $1,000 for the faithful performance of their contract.

Henry E. Reed of the Portland General Electric Co. was present and explained at length in regard to the franchise obtained by his company for lighting the city. He supposed the matter of taxing the poles and wires would come before the council, and in a mild way protested against any further payment for the franchise obtained. City Attorney Green explained that the ordinance in regard to the poles and wires in the city was in the nature of a license or tax for police protection, and was not intended to inflict hardship on any company. In fact it was more of a protection than an injury.

The appearance of several strangers carrying queer looking boxes and rolls of paper was accounted for when Ald. Raser arose and announced that he thought best to look over "those vault bids." The recorder fished out two sealed bids and those who were not in the know began to wake up. The strangers, whom many supposed were electric railway, telephone or electric light men, were agents for vaults. They began to press forward to explain, and one left the hall to prepare a bid.

Ald. Norton asked what they were buying, who authorized it and when the sealed bids were called for.

Ald. King wanted to go ahead. So did Ald. Raser, who wanted "to stop all this monkey work and get down to business." This did not seem to satisfy Ald. Norton, and he asked for more information.

One of the agents present told the council a good vault could be obtained for $285. Realizing that it would be impossible to buy a vault, the subject was changed as to where the vault was to stand when it was purchased.

After the matter was thoroughly sifted and the agents with their pictures in their pockets had left for home, it was ordered that the building committee ascertain the size of the vault to be used that the architect may provide a place for same. The following bills were allowed: J. R. Weimer, draying $4.50 Couch & Co. supplies for poor $9.17 W. L. Thorndyke, stamps $2.00

The improvements on Charleston street were accepted by the council on the recommendation of the city engineer.

The matter of fixing the salary of secretary of the board of health was brought up by the chairman of the finance committee who recommended that it be fixed at $25 per month. Ald. Hewitt wanted more information in regard to the office and the matter was carried over for a week.

The Hayes street contractors were allowed to use such portions of the old sidewalk as will satisfy the owners of the property before which it is laid.

Ald. Norton of the finance committee called the attention of the council to unpaid printing bills in connection with recent street improvements, and asked where the money was to come from for their payment. These bills were contracted by the numerous efforts to improve the streets during the past year. It was developed that all funds in connection with the improvements had been expended, and there was no funds on hand to pay outstanding bills. A way to procure the money was discussed with out result, and the matter was finally referred to the city attorney.

The grading of two blocks on Leavitt street between Jersey and Hayes streets was let to N. A. Gee for $1,123.15.

When the recorder picked up a piece of paper and remarked "I suppose the council knows it is necessary to insure the new city hall," four members smiled, while the three others straightened up and began to ask questions. It was an amusing picture.

Ald. Dobie said it was the contractors business to take care of the building until it was ready to turn over to the city.

Ald. Hewitt asked a few pertinent questions in regard to the insurance.

Ald. Norton did some rapid thinking, but said nothing, realizing that the city had to do something.

The other members smiled and looked wise.

Contractor Youngferdord asked and was given permission to speak. He said if the council would examine the contract they would find that the city had to insure the building. He wanted it insured in his name, and according to law. He could not insure it himself because the building did not belong to him. It was customary for all public buildings in course of construction to be insured.

The contract was produced, and there it was in black and white that the city should insure the new city hall. Accordingly the building was ordered insured in some reliable company.

When the pole and wire ordinance was called it was laid over for another week on motion of Ald. Norton.

The ordinance providing for fire escapes came up for its first reading, and was finally laid on the table.

After discussing a way to fill the old well on the city lot the council adjourned.

Does the Stove Putty Question Interest You?

Want to know why a stove with puttied joints is expensive?

WHEN a stove manufacturer doesn't know how, or doesn't want to spend the money necessary to make an air-tight stove, he plugs up the cracks with stove putty.

Oh yes, that stove will heat as good as any of them for a few weeks, perhaps.

It isn't long, though, before the putty dries up, contracts and falls out.

Then you have a chink or crevice, open to the suction from the chimney.

The valuable gases, which should be burned, are forced up along with the smoke.

So is most of the heat.
